

JUNIOR PROM TO BE HELD AT PENN A. C. THIS EVENING

Colonial Serenaders to Play; Orchestra will be Assisted by Popular Crooner

BEAUTIFUL DECORATIONS

Tonight is the night for the Junior-Pre-Junior Prom, which will be held in the main ball room of the Penn Athletic Club. After many preparations and much planning, the committee is ready to say that this will be a wonderful dance.

At nine o'clock the music of the "Colonial Serenaders," a well-known Atlantic City orchestra, will start the dance with a full complement of scintillating musical arrangements. The dance will continue until one o'clock and promises to be an affair of considerable note.

Along with the alluring music there will be many novelty numbers. Harry John, a well-known crooner with this orchestra, will attempt to out-do Rudy Vallee and Russ Columbo combined. And if the music that they produce doesn't enchant many feminine hearts, there is something wrong with the hearts.

The ball room will be decorated in good taste and lighted appropriately. Those who know the architecture and decorations of the Main Ball Room at the Penn Athletic Club can readily understand the beautiful effects that can be created. The committee of the Junior-Pre-Junior Prom have taken into consideration

Brilliant Season Ended by Dragons

Gold and Blue Five Averages
Thirty-three Points Per Game

The basketball season just completed was in more ways than one the most successful in the history of Drexel. First, it was an improvement over former years in that the Dragons played teams of a much higher calibre than heretofore and made an enviable record against them. Also it marked the first year of competition for the Dragons in the newly created Eastern Pennsylvania Collegiate Basketball League. In this league the Dragons finished tied for fourth place with Albright, having a record of five wins and seven losses.

The remaining five games on the 1932 schedule were with non-league members and each one resulted in a win for the Dragons, giving the Gold and Blue a record of three victories as against seven defeats for the season. Coach Halas deserves great credit for bringing the basketball team along in such fine shape and enabling the Gold and Blue to gain such a fine record. This in itself, coming on the heels of our best football season, is a great record and makes a mark for the diamond squad to shoot at. If the nine makes a good record the year in Drexel sports will be a complete success.

The Dragons this season scored 573 points in seventeen games, which is an average of more than 33 points per game, which is no mean average for any ball club. Congratulations, Dragons, and here's to your success on the diamond and cinder-path this spring.

DIETETICS CLUB DINNER FOLLOWED BY LECTURE

The Drexel Dietetics Club held their annual dinner at the Sarah Drexel Van Rensselaer dormitory last Tuesday evening. An entire section of the huge dining hall was reserved for the banquet and their friends.

Following the banquet, the entire club went to the Drexel Auditorium to hear a lecture on nutrition delivered by Dr. Walter Eddy, of Columbia University.

Dr. Eddy is an authority on this subject and his talk was thoroughly enjoyed by all who attended. Nearly two hundred dietitians and students attended the lecture.

NEWMANITES ELECT J. PRENTZEL PRES.

Communion Breakfast
Held at St. James;
Halas, Speaker

On Sunday, March 6, the Newman Club attended Mass at nine o'clock in St. James' Church. Immediately after the service breakfast was served in the school hall. The Communion Breakfast is held every term, which is in accordance with the constitution of the club.

Dr. Ross, pastor of St. James', extended a greeting of welcome to the club. Walter Halas, our athletic coach, then spoke in a delightful manner on the benefits derived from belonging to the Federation of College Catholic Clubs. Reverend James Plunket, the club chaplain, then addressed the club on the duties of being Newmanites.

The club president, James Ferriter, then introduced the newly elected officers of the club, who will take office next term. Those having been elected are: President, Jack Prentzel; Vice-President, Jim Obrecht; Treasurer, Francis McErnery; Secretary, Peg Leilly, and Lecturer, Ceal Barry.

A business meeting of the club was held on Thursday evening, March 4, in the Women's Lounge. It was definitely decided to hold the Spring Informal Dance on April 22, at St. James' Hall. "Benny" Pritchard and his Blue Dragons have been secured for the affair, which promises to be as great a success, if not greater, than last year's dance.

The club wishes to announce the beginning of a "question box" when members may ask questions pertaining to religion or subjects relating

Highway Engineer Advises Students

Development of Roadbuilding
Necessitates Wide Range of Technical Training

During the past twenty-five years the development of road building has increased beyond the most optimistic predictions of the early highway engineer. The expenditures for state highway construction and maintenance for the year 1931 are estimated over $964,000,000. This amount is a slight decrease of what was spent in 1930.

A large number of students entering college enroll in the school of civil engineering and majoring in highway courses without a knowledge of what is expected of them after they complete their college work. The following comments are offered to the student engineer considering taking a course in highway engineering:

The engineer should be taught something of methods and organization of the great business machine from which he so often draws his pay. He should have an understanding of the principles of banking, corporation organization and financing. He should remember that every dollar he spends is appropriated by the taxpayer by means of local bond issues or legislative procedure. Funds appropriated by Acts passed by a State Legislature are usually specific in their intent. It is therefore necessary that the engineer thoroughly familiarize himself of the law in order

ENGINEERS HOLD JOINT MEETING

Motion Pictures Shown to Students and Their Guests;
Hill Principal Speaker

The A. S. M. E. and the A. S. C. E. held a joint meeting on Tuesday evening, March 1, 8 P. M. in the Art Gallery. Each society presented its own features.

The Mechanical Engineers presented as a speaker Mr. J. B. Hill, chief chemist of the Atlantic Refining Co. The Chemical Engineers had as their feature a motion picture made by Bausch and Lomb on the making of optical instruments and lenses.

The speakers of the meeting were men with a wide range of experience in their own particular field and they endeavored to put their talks into as clear and concise language as possible.

Mr. Hill spoke on the manufacture and requirements of modern motor gasolines and gave the details of the gum and octane rating tests.

The meeting was attended by some fifty members of both societies and all seemed to have enjoyed both features to judge from the questions and the attention paid.

The affair was quite unique inasmuch as members of the A. S. M. E. from the University of Pennsylvania were attending as guests in addition to the regular members of the Drexel branch of A. S. M. E.

It is hoped that in the future members of the Engineering societies of Drexel and Penn will be able to co-operate with each other to the mutual interest and advancement of their respective societies.

Cinder Path Squad Begins Practice

Track Team Faces Tough
Schedule, Opening with Delaware

The call for track candidates was answered by a turnout of fifty men, as fifteen of these are lettermen from last year's team. Coach Leonard feels confident that with this nucleus to work with he can turn out a championship team and thus better the record of last year's squad which was runner-up in the central Pennsylvania championship meet.

In an interview with Captain "Bill" Wright, it was learned that in the championship meet last year, sixteen of the eighteen men who went on the trip managed to place. Captain "Bill" feels that as a majority of these men are back this season, they show great improvement and pave the way for future victories. When the weather improves the squad will immediately begin outdoor practice at Drexel Field.

The season's schedule is one of the hardest a Dragon team ever faced:

- April:
16—Delaware (home)
23—West Chester (away)
29,30—Penn Relays (Philadelphia)
- May:
13, 14—Middle Atlantic (Easton)
17—Ursinus (home)
21—C. P. T. C. (Lewisburg)
28—Muhlenberg (home)

Kappa Phi Delta Wins 1932 Title First Leg on W.J. Stevens Trophy

The Kappa Phi Delta fraternity five has won the Interfraternity Basketball Trophy for the 1932 season. The trophy, this time, was presented by "Bill" Stevens, Graduate Manager of Athletics, and takes the place of the one won last year by the Alpha Upsilon Mu five, who now have permanent possession of that trophy. By winning the title this year the Kappa Phi Delta five won the first leg on the trophy, which must be won three times for permanent possession. The trophy is now on view in the trophy case in the entrance to the court.

FRESHMEN TO HOLD ANNUAL DANCE

Hotel Pennsylvania Will be Scene of Gay Affair
Jimmy DeAngelis to Furnish Rhythms

The Freshmen on Friday, April 15, will hold their first social function. The annual Frosh Frolic will be held in the same place as last year's affair, namely, the Hotel Pennsylvania. The dance this year promises to be a bigger success than last year's. The music is to be provided by De Angelis and his twelve piece orchestra. This orchestra has met with huge success ever since its organization several years ago. De Angelis has an engagement for an indefinite period with the Columbia Broadcasting System. His is the most popular band on the Penn State and Bucknell Campuses. Following the Frosh Frolic he will tour the South where he has engagements at twenty-seven colleges. His presence at Drexel was made possible through his desire to introduce his band to Drexel students. With this excellent music assured the dance should be a great success. Another point which should prove popular to the student body is the price. The tax this year has been cut from the usual three dollars to two and one-half dollars. To sum up the whole situation, it appears that the Freshmen this year are offering a better dance with better music at a better price.

PROF. L. TERRONE COACHES DREXEL

Fencing to be Recognized as Men's Sport Here;
Backed by Faculty

Drexel is now attempting to enter upon a new field of athletics. Through the hard and constant work of a few members of the men's student body and, through the co-operation of Mr. Henneberg, the sponsor, through the backing of a number of the faculty, with the help of the competent coach, Professor Terrone, and with the aid of the men interested in this ancient art, it is hoped to establish fencing as a recognized sport in Drexel. The fencing team is extremely fortunate in having Professor Leonardo Terrone, a coach of the University of Pennsylvania's fencing team, that of Swarthmore, and that of Drexel's woman squad, who has behind him a world-wide fame. He has been an instructor of fencing for over 35 years at various

Baseball Opening Draws Large Squad

Wealth of Infield Material
Available for This Year's Nine

Now that the basketball season has been brought to a close, Coach Halas has turned his attention to the Gold and Blue's diamond squad. Being favored with favorable weather last week, the coach was able to hold outdoor practice on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Thursday and Friday the embryo ballplayers practiced on Curtis Field, and on Saturday at Drexel Field.

Ten veterans remain from former teams around which Coach Halas will construct the 1932 varsity baseball team. These men are Captain Kershner, Suddell, Johnson, Reynolds, Kean, Bublit, last year's captain Calhoun, Bishop, Fleming and "Shorty" Desimone.

The outlook for a fine team is very bright, inasmuch as fifty men answered the first call for candidates. Coach Halas was extremely pleased with this fine showing, especially so because of the wealth of infield material that reported. Last year the Dragons were unfortunate,

GRATZ PRINCIPAL ADDRESSES CLUB

"Need for Commercial Teachers
Great in Our High Schools;
Shorthand an Asset"

Mr. Calhoun, principal of the Simon Gratz High School, was the main speaker at the first social meeting of the Business Science Teachers' Club, held in the Women's Lounge, last Tuesday night.

"There is still a definite call for good commercial teachers, especially men who can teach shorthand," Mr. Calhoun said in developing his interesting talk dealing with commercial education in the high schools. Following the talk an open forum was held in which questions were answered by the speaker.

Mr. William Suddell, vice-president of the club, introduced Mr. Calhoun, after Miss Radell, instructor in the Business Administration School and sponsor of the club, welcomed all the students to the meeting.

Refreshments were served after the meeting was adjourned by President Alger Whittcraft, and various groups held informal discussions with Mr. Calhoun. In addition to the senior commercial teaching students a large group of juniors and sophomores also attended the meeting.

Haverford College Host to Engineers

Drexel A. I. E. E. to Convene with Other Colleges
at Meeting

The Drexel Chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will join the chapters of the other colleges in the Philadelphia area, in the annual convention, which will assemble at Haverford College on Monday, Mar. 14. Seniors in the Electrical Engineering Department and all undergraduate members of the A. I. E. E. will be excused from all classes on that day. Immediately following the convention a gala dinner will be held at the Engineers' Club.

"Al" Werner was the speaker at the last regular meeting of the Drexel Chapter which was held in the Curtis Hall Lab. "Al", a senior in electrical engineering, delivered a very interesting lecture and demonstration on "Insular String Potentiometers." Mr. Lange of the Electrical Engineering Department was the honored guest.

"Ed" Hadra.

This is the last issue of the TRIANGLE which will be published during the winter term. Publication will be resumed during the second week of the spring term.

DREXEL DEBATERS WILL BROADCAST OVER C.B.S. NETW'K

Series Begins with U. of P.;
McCurdy and Brownback
Drexel Representatives

ENGAGE IN SIX DEBATES

The debating society of Drexel Institute has obtained the services of the Columbia Broadcasting System from 3.30 to 4 P. M. for six consecutive weeks, beginning March 25. The first debate will be held on this date, when the Drexel team will be opposed by the team of the Zelosophic Society of the University of Pennsylvania. Drexel will take the affirmative of the topic, "Resolved, That in the present emergency the United States should adopt the Dole System instead of resorting to charity." Franklin McCurdy and Thomas Brownback will be the Drexel representatives, while the University team has not yet been selected.

The opponents for the remaining debates have not been selected, but negotiations are being carried on with several colleges and the schedule will be completed within the next week.

Radio debates are conducted in a slightly different manner than formal debates. Because of the limited time available, each team is limited to two men. Each of these men is allowed but four minutes' speaking time. One rebuttal speech is allowed each team, and these speeches are five minutes in length. The rebuttal for the negative must be given without preparation, as no intermission is allowed. This affords quite a test for the ability of the speaker.

Drexel Girls Hostesses to Various Clubs at Dorm.
Scholarship Awarded

Those members of the Drexel Home Economics Club and Drexel Institute faculty who were privileged to attend the dinner meeting of the Philadelphia Home Economics Association held recently in the Sarah Drexel Van Rensselaer Dormitory, spent a most enjoyable evening.

Drexel girls were hostesses for the evening, and took pleasure in conducting the guests through their new dormitory home. An excellent dinner prepared by Miss Yarde and her assistants was served in the dormitory dining room.

Miss Ardenia Chapman, Associate Professor of Home Economics at Drexel, and President of the Philadelphia Home Economics Association, presided. She introduced Professor R. C. Disque, Academic Dean

FENCING COACH REWARDS WORK OF TEAM CAPTAIN

Polly Sherman, a junior in the Business Administration School, was recently awarded a complete set of fencing equipment by Mr. Leonardo Terrone, instructor in fencing at both Drexel and the University of Pennsylvania.

The award was made in appreciation of Polly's fine work in helping to promote fencing as a sport at Drexel. It consists of a mask, chest protector, fencing gloves, and foil.

Mr. Terrone, who was born in Italy, is well known for his expert teaching along fencing lines. His method is his own, in that he stresses muscular co-ordination all the way through. This was especially evidenced in the results shown at the recent play-day contests held at Temple where co-eds of the fencing teams of Penn, Temple and Drexel exhibited their talents. The Penn and Drexel girls were exceptionally fine in their exhibitions in the art of fencing.

Triangle Platform

1. The abolishment of the Honor System of the Women's Student Government.
2. The elimination of extensively organized politics in school affairs.
3. The freedom of student discussion through the medium of the student publications.
4. The institution of a program of assemblies that will arouse voluntary student interest and attendance.
5. The furtherance of student interest in national and foreign affairs.
6. Establishment of honor courses for those students of outstanding ability.
7. More social contacts for the lower classes through the medium of court dances and similar functions.

BRIAND, MAN OF PEACE— Death of French Statesman Removes Leading Advocate of International Goodwill.

Affairs in France that his name has become a synonym for that department, Briand has established himself as the apostle of peace, a zealous participant in every movement for the establishment of international amity.

His career is not only outstanding from the point of view of the tremendous steps he has accomplished in the cause of peace, but it is also unique due to the radical changes in his political views, and the number of times he held the Ministry of Foreign Affairs under various Cabinets. Although his entrance to the Chamber of Deputies marked him as the most extreme of radicals, the coming of responsibility rather tamed his views, and his first invitation to a seat in the Cabinet came to him in 1906, only four years after his debut as a deputy.

If the fact that he had held the Ministry of Foreign Affairs for so many years was the only outstanding fact about his career, he would be remembered only as an astute politician. Up to the time of his membership in the Painleve Cabinet in 1925, his reputation for political astuteness was the most noticeable feature of his career, for he had shown up to that time only mediocre qualities of statesmanship. But in the following year, he achieved enduring fame as the first man to frankly advocate peace across the Rhine and the establishment of friendly and enduring co-operation between those two nations whose history fate has decreed should be marked by war and bloodshed. With the resulting treaty of Locarno as a stepping stone, Briand in the last five years has achieved everlasting fame with his work in the League of Nations, the advocacy of an United States of Europe, and his co-operation with Mr. Kellogg in forming a covenant outlawing war. He leaves an illustrious example to the statesmen of the world of the power of a sincere worker for goodwill among the nations. The trust imposed in him not only by France, but by the statesmen of the other nations of the world, made him indispensable to the Cabinets of the French Government, whether they were of the right or left.

The treaties which Briand has left behind him have not fulfilled the hopes and expectations of those who work for international peace in the world. They are, however, definite milestones of progress in the search which man is making for what at present seems an almost hopeless ideal—a world without war. Amidst the present chaos of world politics, however, the fame of Aristide Briand stands secure, and the name of Briand will go down through the years as the unflinching and ever-zealous "apostle of peace."

MORE COURT DANCES— Triangle Advocates Renewal of Custom of Weekly Court Dances And R.O.T.C. Band Concerts.

Not so very many years ago it was the custom of the R. O. T. C. Band to give concerts on Wednesday from the balcony in the Great Court and at that time, court dances were given at more frequent intervals than they are at present. Why have these been discontinued? Certainly the music of the Band was enjoyed, for a large attendance was always in evidence during the concerts. The same question may also be applied to the matter of court dances. Whenever these functions are given, the court is always crowded, which seems to indicate that the students want and enjoy them.

For a very large percentage of the students the price of the ordinary dance given outside of Drexel Institute is prohibitive, and it is almost impossible to get away from this condition, for the financial requirements of conducting a dance in any of the large hotels or clubs necessitates at least a tax of three dollars. However, why is it necessary to make these affairs, combined perhaps with fraternity dances, the only affairs of a social nature which will include a wide student attendance? The college, being in the midst of a large metropolis, lacks a campus, and thus to a great extent misses that social unity which is the feature of the smaller college located away from the large cities. Would not weekly court dances given on Wednesday afternoons from 12-2 o'clock be a feature which would be heartily welcomed by Drexel students, as well as being a definite aid to the social unity of Drexel?

The TRIANGLE very strongly advocates the return of the R. O. T. C. Band concerts and the conducting of weekly court dances, that is, when they do not interfere with assembly. Both have a definite value in not only lending color to the school, but also supplying entertainment which is greatly enjoyed by the student body. If the stronger organizations of the school will sponsor the dances, they will be performing a very real service to the Institute and a complete program of social activities could be scheduled for the afternoon with little expense to each of the various organizations.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

The new gesture of including an editorial platform in the TRIANGLE is just another achievement you and your staff may mark down to your credit. It is worth flattering comment, indeed.

Every one of the seven points you have set down should be of vital interest to the student body. They are so important that no one could be said to take precedence over the other. In spite of adverse criticism heard in court gossip, students should realize this to be an unusual opportunity for self-expression which too often is suppressed, or else fails to be heard by the proper persons. This, of course, does not mean that students should forget that discretion is necessary in "airing" any viewpoint, since the very nature of our society demands some consideration for the other fellow. But fortunately, there is no law of society which sanctions utter submissiveness on the part of the individual to things to which he conscientiously objects or sees room for improvement.

Your recent editorials concerning the Honor System and school politics, respectively, were quite good arguments. As for the first, there is something to be said on either side. But, as for politics as they exist in Drexel, I see no need for controversy. They are an obnoxious practice. And it is my experience to notice that those who play at them do so with the sole motive of trying to outwit the other fellow and thus gain their own selfish ends. They seem proud of the fact that they are neophytes in the political game. One wonders what it avails them? Probably popularity and notoriety are synonymous terms? But pursuit of either seems such aimless waste of time. Students should have maturer interests.

Now, as to the remedy: It seems that recent reprimands and penalties have served only to remove some offenders from the limelight. They have hid to their political underworld, there to issue orders to those who have taken their places. It is high time students who are put in office by their fellow students learn "to paddle their own canoes." If this is impossible then why not abolish elections altogether, and have classes run by appointed boards? This would at least eliminate politics and give us responsible and sincere officers in our organizations.

Harry T. Frownfelter, '32.

To the Editor:

I for one, and most certainly not the only one, heartily commend our TRIANGLE Staff for its recent adoption of a platform. It takes initiative and courage to institute opposition to the established lethargy and complacency, especially when the opinions advanced differ from those of an administrative authority. Regardless of whether the platform is wise or not, its opponents cannot deny that it is advanced with the best of intentions. The spirit behind the editorial policy is in itself evidence of the sterling character of its proponents.

The administration of Drexel Institute has frequently indicated that it aims to do something more for the student than merely to develop technical skill. I believe that they want the Drexel graduate to learn how to conduct himself in social affairs, and to develop a character that will be a credit to both himself and his Alma Mater. If the student is carefully guarded from influences which the wisdom of their elders knows to be harmful, will that student be prepared to cope intelligently with those influences when he meets them in later life, or will he be "innocent" and oblivious to their possibly detrimental effect? If the student is made to avoid cribbing through fear of expulsion or even social ostracism, will he (or she) consequently act accordingly when that immediate fear is removed after graduation? The findings of modern psychologists does not indicate that he will. Dr. Cameron, Professor of Educational Psychology at the University of Illinois, has made the following statement: "To the extent that the compulsion to continue a task comes from within, it results in permanent training; but if it is imposed from without, it does not function unless the outward authority is present."

The "Honor System" insures the presence of outward authority in school. After school, what? If the purpose of education is to learn how to pass examinations, the system is excellent. However, if character development is desired, it is questionable. Self-respect cannot be imbued der that he may legally comply with its provisions.

HIGHWAY ENGINEER

ADVISES STUDENTS

Personal management, salesmanship, business statistics, purchasing and advertising also enter into the engineer's profession. In the field of economics the engineer should be taught how to express his ideas clearly, not in writing, but also in speech. Courses in English composition should be incorporated with the preparation of engineering reports. Public speaking should be required and encouragement given to the student to make use of every opportunity to speak before a group of people.

In order that the engineer may enable to judge the quality of work done in a shop or in the field and strengthen his judgment of the capability of his employers he should be given training in the machine shop, forge and foundry.

Granted that the engineer has grasped something of the broad principles of business management, he will not be able to make full use of that knowledge until he can by the force of his own personality and by skill in expressing his ideas in an understandable manner "sell himself" to the business man and the public at large. He must establish his ability as an engineer, convince them of that fact and demonstrate the value of his judgment in helping to establish the policies of industry and government. Not every engineer can or will be successful to the full extent of this statement, but even though he does fall short, he will be a better citizen because of the broader training he has received. The brief insight into business management will help him to understand and viewpoint of the business man and banker with whom he will almost inevitably come in contact.

through force, but it can by means of informative advice. Respect for immature opinions and encouragement of student discussion is the most direct method of inculcating ideals which are both socially desirable and individually advantageous. These ideals will undoubtedly be questioned by students who are both mentally keen and uninformed. It is to their best advantage that such questions be answered during the formative period of their life. Why not?

FERRETINGS

By JIM FERRITER

Here we are once again, but alas! we fear it is for the last time. Why? Do you really want to know? Well, you asked for it; don't squawk if it hurts. When Jimmy, our boss, started this column, he did it with the sole intention of having some fun about various people at school, no special ones, just any who most of you know, but he wanted you to notice them. The column has always been written in a spirit that was entirely in fun and never low or petty. Personal? Of course, how else could such a column be written? To get back to our subject, there are people who couldn't read the column in the same spirit as it was written, and therefore they must needs make complaints to the Editor. The result is the discontinuance, temporarily at least, of Ferretings.

By the way, we are still pinching, but only part time this week. We're kinda writing a start and Jimmy is going to finish his last Ferretings for you. Some of you know who "we" are by now, but most of you don't, which is probably just as well. If you knew there might be another anti-society of some kind started. Perhaps an Anti-Substitution of Column Writers or something like that.

One thing we can say is that we thank Jimmy a lot for letting us do the column last week and also for never putting us in the column. He couldn't do that though. Reason? You never saw her. Lives 'way up in New York State. Jimmy never got us, so we won't say anything about him, but we know a 'naughty bunch of things we could say, but Jimmy's our pal, and so is Doris.

Yes, we agree with you, we've said plenty for a pinch-hitter, and now to let our boss finish, or better, do his last Ferretings in the way that only he can do it.

Take it away, Jimmy, and thanks again for letting us in on the fun. We'll do something for you some day. Okaaay, Ferriter!

Well, here we are back on the job again—sure does seem funny to be writing this, since it is to be our last one—n you know they are still so many loving pairs around this here Great Court of ours that it really does seem a shame to have to stop now, especially when we are in the midst of things, as it were.

An apology, folks, we made a mistake. That certain brunette whom we connected with a prominent Kappa Sig—senior and president of his fraternity, does not live at the Dorm—Ev lives somewhere in this big city of ours. Charles wishes us to keep her specific address a secret 'cause he wants no cutting in. Well, we don't blame you a bit, Charlie.

Here is a believe it or not. Did you know that the friendly young drummer in the "orchestra" around school goes up to Reading, Pa., every Saturday night, no matter how late the band finishes playing? Yes, siree; and it's rumored about that Ed likes blondes quite a bit. O. K., ol' boy, as long as Ben doesn't care.

Who is the mysterious "N. S. Butz," who writes little notes on a magazine called "Real Silk—Fashion News"? Boy, oh boy—you certainly have two young women looking for you . . . better duck.

Well, time's getting short and so is space, so we ought to begin to think about closing. Who will be the last one whom we will mention—a student or an instructor? Well, we've been after the students for quite a long time—we've threatened the instructors, but never seriously. Shall we try it?—oh what!—well, here goes.

After much search we believe that we've found the ideal instructor—at least the girls say he is, and we personally have had dealings with him—(our first term here)—as you might expect, he is in the English department, is about six feet tall—dark, wiry hair—a mustache (little stubby one)—is of German descent—has often been a chaperone at the various class dances, and used to live, for a while at least, in Harrisburg—who? Why most any Home Ec. girl will tell you—well guess we must say who since you don't know any of those . . . but we'll only say his first name (and with a prayer)—it's Walter. Can you imagine an English prof with a name like that? Well, anyhow he is the ideal prof—so hats off to "Walt."

We hope you liked it—and

DRAGONS HALT ALUMNI SQUADS

Varsity Five Sinks Grads in Spirited Fray by 39-17 Score

Youth showed its superiority over old age last Saturday evening when the Dragon basketball varsities, both boys and girls, defeated the Alumni aggregations to the tune of 39-17 and 43-42, respectively.

"Johnny" Kliendienst, a graduate of '28, was master of ceremonies for the men grads and gave each former Dragon star an introduction which had the crowd in a constant uproar. Incidentally the uproar was composed of everything from "horse laughs" to "giggles." All of the crowd seemed to remember the contests of years before when these Dragons prowled around the Drexel basketball floor and showed their teeth to some of the best teams in the East.

In the first half the Alumni showed their stuff and passed rings around the regulars. However, in the later part of the opening chapter the Varsity lived up a bit and the half ended 18-13. Connel's snappy shooting and the masterful ball-handling of "Christ" Swartz, former Drexel stars, provided keen competition for the Varsity boys in spite of the fact most of the taps from center were captured by them. The spectators were in a continuous uproar, laughing at the comic antics of the former Dragon stars, who nearly succeeded in tying a few of Coach Halas' boys in knots.

In the second half the Halas' charges began to find the range, which netted them six tallies in the first few minutes of play. Early in the first half the Varsity was cutting and passing around the former stars with such speed and precision, that the Alumni might have been on its heels. A little later the boys of former years recovered something of their former poise and now and then the ball filtered through the Varsity ranks to help build up what seemed like a thoroughly deflated Alumni score. At last, however, "old age" showed on the grads, and in the last five minutes of play the game was turned into a rout, which even the best master-minding of W. J. Bill Stevens, "Graduate Manager of Athletics", who annually casts his lot with the grads in the role of coach, could neither stem nor stop. The game ended with the Varsity boys at a 39-17 advantage over the former stars of '23, '24, '25, '26, '27 and '29.

Bublitz and Eckelmeyer were high scorers for the Dragon Varsity with 11 and 9 tallies to their credit. Joe Weinberger and Bob Kirkpatrick led the grads' attack.

The Blue and Gold Maidens played a nip-and-tuck game with the Alumnae, and it took a last-minute goal by "Peg" Brooks, star Dragon forward, to snare the victory to the tune of 43-42.

Alabama University is noted for always coming through with something new, they now have a "Flunk Dammit Flunk" Club whose purpose is to create a brotherly feeling among the lost souls who were pledged to fraternities but who failed to make the required grade for initiation. The stinkweed is the flower of this humble organization.

French classes of Whittier College in California will meet in a French restaurant for the regular hour. Which all reminds me that there must be some clever spots in Philadelphia for the assembling of Drexel's German classes; they probably would not appreciate the suggestion however.

Believe it or not but the playing of "Minnie the Moocher" was the last straw that caused chaperones at Bernard College to abolish jazz bands from future dances at Barnard. Wotta life!

Co-eds at the University of Illinois are being taught to sprawl gracefully and harmlessly by the physical education department—too many of them fell the wrong way in an indoor ice skating rink there.

In answer to the recent Bryn Mawr quiz sent out to Bryn Mawr College students the following were the answers: Most Bryn Mawr girls set love above wealth in picking a husband and place a career second. They also prefer a man who is their equal socially as well as intellectually!

On account of Leap Year, the girls at Temple University who are on the editorial staff of the newspaper have taken complete charge of the March editions.

To encourage attendance at the dances at Penn State, free dancing lessons are given to anyone wishing to learn.

Of the 806 students enrolled at Goucher College only eight have no religious denominational connections, and twenty-five different religions are represented.

Read this and weep: "In an effort to alleviate the horrors of mid-year exams, tea, soup and crackers were served at Wellesley College each night at 9.30 and the annual tea-dance given by the Juniors for the Freshmen was held directly after the Freshman English exam."

A home for women students at the university is to be opened shortly in Munich. This is the first dormitory ever to be built in a German town. We wonder if someone didn't give them the idea after seeing the splendor.

BEARS BOW TO DRAGON QUINTET

Protests of Ursinus Coach Enable Dragons to Sink Bears

The Dragons won their final league game of the season on March 2 in Curtis Hall by downing the Ursinus five by a 36-33 count. By winning this game as Muhlenberg defeated Albright, enabled the Drexel quintet to tie for fourth place.

This game ended quite unusually. With the score tied at 32 all, Johnson was fouled and as he advanced to the line to shoot, Coach Chase of Ursinus, protested so loudly that Referee Lewis called a technical foul on Ursinus. Coach Chase continued to protest and the referee made it two shots and later three and ordered Coach Chase off the floor. At this point Coach Halas interceded and the Ursinus mentor was allowed to remain. Johnson sank one of his two chances and Bublitz made good the three shots granted by the calling of the fouls on Coach Chase, giving the Gold and Blue the game.

The game was nip and tuck throughout and the Dragons played one of the best games this season. The Ursinus team played a good game and presented a well balanced attack. The fray was exceptionally close until the final minute, when the outburst of the Bear's coach gave the Gold and Blue an opportunity to snatch the victory, which they did. Captain Eckelmeyer, Bublitz and Johnson starred in the attack, while "Kid" Wallace did some keen guarding.

The loss of this game dropped Ursinus lower in the race, and if Muhlenberg wins its remaining game the Bears will finish in the cellar.

In our next issue we will give the final league standings and the high scorers of the league, which are to be announced at a meeting of the league officials in the near future.

Already members are showing a keen interest in this new policy of the club and we hope every member will attend the next meeting to hear Father Plunket's talk, which we know will be entertaining as well as instructive.

Court Chatter

By WM. E. WEAVER

BANG! BANG! BANG!
Who's that knocking at my door?
Who's that knocking at my door?
Oh, who's that knocking at my door?
Cried this author with a tremble.

It's only us, we want the cuss,
This "Chatter" guy we're gonna muss;
We'll break his neck off at the waist,
And smash his nose, his eyes we'll paste;
We'll teach him not to write in haste,
His stuff last week showed lousy taste!

Should I up and let 'em in?
Should I take it on the chin?
Oh, the door they're breaking in,
Gee, why ain't I a twin!
I saw right there that I was worsted,
So out the window I ge-bursted!

Well, anyway, somebody got "enthusiastic" about last week's article.

After out-distancing my pursuers, I wearily parked myself upon a Court bench. While regaining my breath, I cast my optics around seeking some new ideas.

Say, did you know that the human being is the only animal that leans? In this respect our co-eds seem extremely "human." Between classes they make the Court balcony rails look like those upon a sea-going liner on a stormy day. Well, we always said that if there was any good in a person, an ocean voyage would bring it out.

Miss Chapman introduced Miss Margaret Welsh, President of the West Philadelphia High School Home Economics Club; Miss Helen Brown, President of the Home Economics Club at Frankford High School; Miss Jean Evanson, President of the Temple University Club, and Miss Elizabeth Porter, President of the Drexel Institute Home Economics Club,—who with representatives of their respective clubs were guests of the association.

Dr. Henrietta W. Calvin, Director of Home Economics in the Philadelphia schools, and chairman of the committee on arrangements, for the meeting, then called on Miss Elizabeth MacBride, who announced the

The only explanation that we can think of is that they are accustomed to lean upon some big, hairy-chested, outdoor he man, who is temporarily absent. So the railing must bear up under the strain.

Some of these co-eds look as though they expect a husband who could support them in a manner that they are accustomed to—seeing in the movies—others look as though even I might stand a chance.

Several girls were gazing wistfully at the two small scraps of yellow streamer hanging mournfully from the chandelier of the Court. Some girl must have had a high time at the dance. She should take her belongings home.

After all, we are extremely partial to the fairer sex—need we remind you that half our ancestors wore skirts?

A loud noise temporarily disturbed our meditations. Two Freshmen were arguing a Physics problem—whether a gold fish swimming in 1 liter of water at —10 degrees C., shivering at the rate of 3,429 vibrations per semester, would perspire 3 or 4 pints per day when the temperature of the water is raised to —19 degrees C.

completion of the Aliea A. Johnson Scholarship,—a scholarship open to any graduate of the Philadelphia High Schools who wishes to pursue higher education in Home Economics. Marjorie Cohen, a junior in the School of Home Economics at Drexel Institute, is the recipient of the scholarship this year.

The address of the evening was made by Dr. James Madison Wood, President of Stephens College, Columbia, Missouri, who spoke on the subject, "New Adventures in the Education of Women."

Dr. Wood told of the experimental work they are doing at Stephens College in establishing certain new courses of study, as a result of several years of research and investigation. They fall under the following general heads: Problems of physical health; mental hygiene; extra-curricular activities; communication; appreciation of the finer things in life (literature, art, and music); philosophy of living, and consumpti-

ALUMNI NEWS

On Saturday evening, March 5, again Drexel Institute was opened especially to entertain the Alumni, for this was the night of the double-header basketball game (the Alumnae vs. the Women's Varsity and the Alumni vs. the Men's Varsity). But despite the fact that the Alumni boasted strong lineups, which included a galaxy of former court stars, the Dragon varsity chalked up a 39-17 victory, while the sextet nosed out the Alumnae by a 43-42 score. Arthur Tucker, Albert Hey, Louis Weinberger, John Kirkpatrick, Joe Foley, Leo Redmond, Chris Schwarz, Ralph Connell and Michael Dugan were the players for the Alumni. Next year they hope to get a few more practices in before the game and then show the Dragons a thing or two. Margie Gilson, Mary Stone, Honey Henderson, Mary Bennis and Audrey Rust, all of whom have played on the Drexel Varsity for two or more years, made up the team for the Alumnae. The honors for this game should go to Margie Gilson, who made it possible for the Alumnae to put on such an exciting game, only losing by one point.

The dance sponsored by the Varsity Club in the Great Court, which was gaily decorated with blue and gold streamers and Drexel banners, put the finishing touch to a delightful evening.

The Membership Campaign is on! One thousand new members are needed. Our Alumni Secretary has set 100 as her goal. How many members will you get? Do not delay, but start now to solicit your friends whose names are not on the list of active members sent you this week. Names of new members will be published in the TRIANGLE. You will want your class to win. That means YOU must help.

Membership Chairman.

'00 Mr. G. M. Poley has sent to all his Drexel friends his regrets that he could not again see them on Alumni Day but business took him to Lexington, Ky., on that date and not to Drexel Institute. Mr. Poley is now living at 1174 S. Hawthorne Rd., Winston-Salem, N. C. J. Robert Ogden's address is 531 13th Ave., Prospect Park, Penna.

'01 Claudine Gilman, who is married to Eric C. Eberlin, is living in Nearum, Denmark.

'02 Frances Warner is the wife of Mr. Charles M. Hathaway, the American Consul at Munich, Germany. Mrs. August Brecht (Edith Jones) is with the R. J. Sook Co. in Philadelphia and living at 537 East Leverington Ave. Catharine Horn is now Mrs. Archibald Eglin and her address is 55 Meadowbrook Lane, Merion. Mrs. R. M. Trenary (nee Ruth Mintzer) received her degree in February from the University of Penna.

'02 Mrs. R. W. Crouse (Catherine M. White) sailed on January 6 on the "Resolute" on a cruise around the world and instead of being at Drexel Institute on Alumni Day, Mrs. Crouse enjoyed the sights of Bombay, India. Mr. and Mrs. Crouse will arrive home on the last day of May.

'03 Sophia A. Gloeckner's address is 955 Broadway, South Westville, N. J.

'04 George Duffield is in the Advertising and Selling Department of the McGraw-Hill Publishing Company in New York City.

'07 Clement Kirby of the class of '07, sent his regrets that he could not help swell the crowd, and chat with some of his old classmates on Alumni Day, but sent his regards to the Architectural Dept. Mr. Kirby went to Erie, Pa., in 1912, as Architect for the General Electric Company, and in 1916 started in business for himself. He now has his office in the Commerce Building in Erie, and makes a specialty of residences and school buildings.

'10 Jeannette Morrell of the class of '10, is living at 116 E. Elberon Ave., in Atlantic City.

'13 Charles H. Cushman, who graduated from Drexel in 1913 and from the U. S. Naval Academy in 1918, is now Lt. Commander in charge of Construction in Shanghai, China.

'17 Fannie Lou Gill, now Mrs. H. M. Stryker, of Williamsburg, Va., sends the following message to the Drexel Alumni: "I believe I am the only alumna living in this historic and interesting city. Due to the increased interest which the Rockefeller Restoration is creating, there will doubtless be many Drexel Alumni visiting here from time to time. It would be a pleasure to me to have any of them stop by my home, and allow me to assist them in planning a tour of the city to the best advantage."

'20 Mr. and Mrs. George H. Wessell (Anna Fischer), of Venice Park, Atlantic City, announce the birth of a second son, John Frederick, on Jan. 4. His brother, George Henry, is now four years old.

The present make-up of the ball room and they have attacked the problem of decorations accordingly. As a result, the effect that will be created will be fully in harmony with the color scheme of the ball room and the mood of the dancers.

For a long while the committee deliberated upon the question of the proper and appropriate program, and as a result the program of this dance will be quite unique. It promises to be outstanding in its make-up and it fully justifies the work and thought on that which is usually just an incidental of a dance.

It is needless to say that the orchestra has been picked out of many possibilities as one of the best that could be had. The committee had in mind the wishes and desires of the dancers when they picked out this band. It is new, novel and will produce excellent music and it is hoped that the happy couples will like the productions of these "Colonial Serenaders."

The patrons and patronesses of this dance are Dr. and Mrs. Leon D. Stratton, Miss Ruth A. L. Dorsey, Mr. and Mrs. W. Ralph Wagnerseller, Lt. and Mrs. James P. Hulley, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil A. Kapp, Mr. and Mrs. F. George Seuberg, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Kaschenbach.

The following are the members of the committee of the Junior-Prom: In the Junior Class there is George Paulding as chairman, and his fellow committeemen are George L. McCoy, Frank K. Gorry, Eric W. Winchester, Frank E. Seaman, George C. Salmons. In the Pre-Junior Class these men are on the committee: Milo P. Schaefer as treasurer, Jack F. Frailey, John S. Patterson, Al C. McCoy, John S. Franklin and Earl J. Billingsley.

The men on this committee have certainly worked hard to make the Junior-Prom of this year one of the finest dances that has ever been sponsored by the Junior and Pre-Junior classes. They are entitled to and deserve every bit of praise due them.

Under the capable supervision of Professor Terrone, Drexel men are assured of fencing's greatest attributes: accuracy, alertness, poise, and the co-ordination of mind and muscle.

It is hoped that in the near future, Drexel will have a men's fencing team that will hold a high place among the colleges.

At Michigan State College, Lansing, Michigan, they believe in spring real class dances. The price of admission to the junior prom this year was eight dollars, the time, 10 P. M. to 3.30 A. M. And all students attending were permitted to cut all classes after 3 o'clock on the day of the dance and all classes the morning after. The number of cuts permitted at the Michigan State College depends on the scholastic standing of the students. For sophomores, juniors, and seniors on the honor roll class attendance is voluntary.

since there was a marked scarcity of seasoned infielders, but with such a large crowd of ball players the coach should be able to fashion a strong inner defense for the Gold and Blue.

The Drexel ball team is always of the first rank, and from all appearances this year will be no exception. A strong team will be needed, however, to compete with the teams on this year's schedule as released last week. All of the teams in the Eastern Pennsylvania Baseball League are well known for their diamond ability and there are several possible future big league stars on these nines.

The Dragon ball team will have to go some to keep pace with the records set by the championship eleven of last fall and the powerful five which just completed the most successful basketball season in Drexel history. If the ball team does come up to expectations, along with the cinder-paths under Coach Leonard, Drexel will be able to boast a highly successful year in intercollegiate competition.

Industry takes a hint
from the kitchen

The domestic art of baking is closely paralleled in telephone manufacture at Western Electric, where plastic molding is an exact science.

Telephone bell boxes, for instance, are no longer formed of metal. They are molded from a phenol plastic compound—containing carbolic acid, formaldehyde and other ingredients—because Western Electric manufacturing engineers saw the way to make a better product at lower cost. These men developed a new and exceptionally efficient type of plastic molding press—and determined precisely how long to bake the mixture and the exact temperature to use.

In quickly taking advantage of the new art of plastic molding, Bell System engineers once more showed that they have the kind of imagination that keeps American industry forging ahead.
